Cyber Security Liability and Privacy: When a Breach Happens - Who's Liable, Who's Responsible

As cyber attacks plague critical infrastructure, financial institutions, and the federal government, liability and privacy remains a growing concern. With losses mounting and sensitive information being leaked several questions remain unanswered - who's liable, who's responsible, what are enterprises doing to protect their customers? In this panel, experts in cyber security liability, privacy, and insurance will define cyber security and privacy liability, explore the basic coverage offered under cyber security and privacy insurance policies, the types of claims being paid out, the costs for coverage, the process for notification and handling of claims, breach litigation (minimizing the risk of a law suit and finding settlement opportunities), and forensics, crisis management and parties involved when a breach occurs.

These sessions are very interactive and we look forward to your participation.
